THE "BEEF ISSUE."

A SPECTACLE AS BRUTALIZING AS SPANISH BULL FIGHTING.

Scenes at an Indian Agency on the Great Sloux Reservation-Cattle Awaiting Slaughter-Ladies Witnessing the

"Oh, it's going to be a lovely day for the beef issue. I'm so glad," says a young lady at the breakfast table. Every one is animated and expectant. For several days visitors at the agency, besides the usual hospitable welcome, have been greeted with the exclamation: "You are in just in time; you must stay to the beef issue." All through the day before and far into the moonlight night long processions of Indian warons have night long processions of Indian wagons have been coming across the hills, and their occu-pants have gone into camp on the high slopes all around. At an early hour of the morn-ing the whole landscape is full of life and movement. The Indians are decked out in their gayest attire, and some of their costumes are pictorial enough. Most of them still wear the native dress, but some have on a combination of Indian and civilized garb, which is uglier than either alone. Nearly all are barcheaded, and their long black hair, parted in the middle, falls back over their shoulders. Their faces are painted in various bright colors and in all kinds of grotesque figures. The Indian men are very fond of strip of bright colored cloth dangling at their heels or dragging along on the ground behind crat. them. They nearly all wear blankets, which at this time of the year are, most of them, sheets of dirty, gray looking muslin or sheet-ing. These they wrap closely around them, often covering the head and face, all but the

As we look about us after breakfast we see the Indian women and girls harnessing their horses. Carriages are brought to the door for guests, and we are soon all on our way to the government corral. Everybody is going; residents about the agency, young ladies who are teaching schools in the distant camps and others who are visitors from eastern cities. All are in high spirits. Acquaintances ex-change greetings. Indian wagons filled with women and children are moving over the plain from all directions. There are hundreds of young Indian men and women on horse-back. They go curveting and racing about the plain. The Indians never look well on horseback, but they manage to stay on. Their ponies are slight and ugly looking, but tough and enduring. They are the most use-ful and respectable denizens of the Indian country, and are about the only creatures here who earn their rations. The girls sit astride, the same as the men. Some of the belles are in costly apparel. I count more than fifty elk teeth on a large cape worn by a than fifty elk teeth on a large cape worn by a radiant brown maiden. The Building of African Railroads.

I do not agree with Stanley as to the development of Africa by the building of railroads. While stationed at the Congo, in command of the Kearsarge, my former ideas of that country were greatly modified, if not entirely revolutionized. I was in that miasmatic region for over eight months, and the greatest valies I have ever experienced was greatest relief I have ever experienced was when ordered to other waters. Had the Kearsarge been held there a few weeks longer, I doubt very much if we would have had men roads without passing through swamps that would appall anyone unlertaking such a project, and after the road was completed it would not pay the interest of one-tenth of the money invested in the material used in construction, not taking into consideration the vast amount of costly labor incident to preparing a place for the ties to rest upon. After the road is completed it will find little to do, unless the natives in the interior differ greatly from those with whom I came in contact, for they are a lazy, worthless, improvident peo-ple, with no desire to better their condition, and perfectly satisfied when their appetites are satisfied. I cannot believe that the railroad development of Africa will be as easy wearing tails, and when on foot like to have a or practical as of theoretical accomplishment. -Capt. William Bridgman in Globe-Demo-

> Game Found in Southern California. Southern California is defective in the matter of game birds. There are no turkeys, no grouse, no woodcock, but quail are plentiful. The deer are also plentiful, but too tame to be exciting material for the hunt. The hunting season is practically endless for the times of breeding, so arrange themselves that some kind of game is always in season. In flavor the game differs from that of the east. The venison, hares and rabbits are un-questionably superior; the water fowl (with the exception of the black brant) and the quail are inferior. The mountain brooks furnish excellent sport, although the supply of mountain trout is gradually growing smaller. Some of the best fish of the Atlantic are missing from the salt waters of California, and yet these waters abound in strong and active fish that are well worth the trouble of catch ing. The red fish, the rock cod and the barracuda are leading varieties.

ous varieties. The gray wolf is nearly extinct, and the mountain theep and antelope are few and far between. A panther occa-sionally raids a sheep fold, and wildcats and coyotes are quite as numerous as there is any need of. The red fox, raccoon and badger are frequently met with, but the woodchuck, opossum, mink, muskrat, martin, otter, weldard. Poster & Sutherland.
